How can consumer products companies stay relevant and be future-ready with analytics?

With Good Data Comes Great Analytics

COVID-19 outbreak may have fundamentally changed consumer demand and the integrated supply chains that serviced it, defining a "new normal" for businesses and altering some category dynamics forever. The acceleration to advanced analytics has become table stakes for companies that need to adjust to this new normal.

While many consumer centered companies have steadily invested in data collection, generating tons of potentially valuable information, as much as 80% of this consumer data is not mined, meaning companies may not hbe fully clued into their customers' needs. Research reveals that the companies have not tapped completely into the data generated internally within their value chain as well.
