FICCI presents a one-day conference and exhibition to discuss trends, challenges and opportunities in "Housing and Urban Development in North India". The conference aims to establish itself as a significant platform in North India to deliberate upon issues which are critical to the growth of housing and urban infrastructure sectors in the region and explore opportunities for the authorities and industry to usher in holistic and planned development of the region in a sustainable manner.

North Indian states play an important role in shaping the economic environment of the country due to their proximity to India's capital, New Delhi. With big infrastructure projects and industrial corridors being planned in North India, a new wave of development is soon going to sweep the region especially in Punjab and Tri-City. The demand for housing and urban infrastructure in North India will grow tremendously as these projects start to materialise. This conference will majorly focus on sectoral developments in Punjab and Tri-City and brainstorm on trends, markets, future potential and prospects for housing and urban infrastructure projects in the region. It will sensitise the Government, Urban Local Bodies, Planners and Real Estate industry about the scale of challenges, opportunities and new approach to development of futuristic, smart and sustainable cities in North.
